EMOTION

SPRING/SUMMER 2026

Global political and financial instability deeply affects our states of mind. The heaviness of sociopolitical and environmental problems takes its toll on conscious minds, and we need to find escapism to breathe and gather strength and perspective to act on change.

In the current climate, creativity is not just significant; it is paramount. Life goes on, but our moods and attitudes are uniquely shaped. This environment influences our behavior and fashion choices, but creativity emerges as a powerful tool for navigating uncertainty.

People are still catching the “show off “on social media and want to discover new, unique experiences, whether traveling, eating, or tackling challenges like mountaineering or other extreme sports. It is about DOING and BEING something or somewhere different.

Amidst global instability, the societal climate compels us to either magnify the ordinary, leading us towards greater creativity, or to seek refuge in a more serene and sober universe. In both scenarios, the emotional undercurrent is not just present but palpable, forging a sense of unity and belonging in our shared experience of navigating these uncertain times.

We seek values, reassuring elegance, calm, and contact with others—friends, family, or work. After a period where we were privileged to work alone in the comfort of our apartment, we started to wish again for the intellectual proximity of the office and teamwork. In the same way, we are going back to the stores but continuing to use e-commerce for its practicality. For this part of the trend, mid-tones dominate as colors.

Our response to the societal climate is diverse, reflecting the complexity of human behavior. Some seek refuge in other cultures, offering a break from the daily grind, and others prioritize discovering different countries and continents and finding a balance in exploring unfamiliar customs. In this journey, digital technologies play a significant role in impacting our range of colors. Reds, oranges, dark blues, and purples are at the scene's forefront, shaping our fashion choices. Even if we cannot travel physically, we find escapism in traveling through images.

So, on the one hand, we have a sober atmosphere and, on the other, an overflowing desire for creativity. We continue to adapt to a rapidly changing world, which destabilizes us but whose upheaval remains a source of self-expression.

It is a season when lightness and delicacy are accompanied by whimsy, flirtation, and mischief, ethnic influences remain present, and ecology remains safe ground.

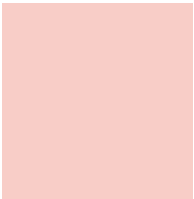

EQUANIMITY

NATURAL TIMELESS

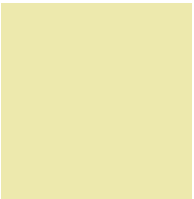

Equanimity is nature-focused, Zen, fluid, and fresh. It announces timeless garments made modern by the materials used. Equanimity refers to mental calmness, composure, and evenness and draws inspiration from the inherent balance found at the beach and the tranquil forms that nature creates over time.

Curved and flowing lines evoke quietness, like the ever-changing movement of the sea and wind. Inspired by the natural formation of coastal lines and shells, they create gentle, natural shapes and surfaces through subtle fabric constructions in weaving and knitting.

Exploration of layering and transparency, like when the water reflects or reveals what is beneath, like shells under shallow water or sunlight filtering through clouds. Color is used in very subtle ways, like shading effects.

FLUIDITY + MOVEMENT

Texture - Flowing - Forming - Layering

Techniques like draping weaves, irregular ribbed knits, and 3D shaping mimic nature's soft undulations and organic forms. These structures focus on fluidity and tactility, integrating lightweight yarns and textures that move gracefully with the body, providing visual and sensory comfort.

BALANCE + HARMONY

Pebbled luxury - understated - Perfection/Imperfection - Clean - Modern

Density is manipulated through embossing, repetition of small patterns or textures, and layering of light fabrics. Elements of harmonious sizes, spacing, and ratios promote order and composure.

Garments flow naturally with the body, featuring soft, fluid silhouettes.

Lightweight overlays and delicate textures enhance movement, while structured layering provides depth and complexity, allowing the garments to appear both ethereal and grounded.

YARNS IN FOCUS : PAPER YARNS

Promoting graceful drape and dynamic interaction with the body, the paper yarns are woven and knitted in loose, more open structures, allowing the fabric to move fluidly. Experimenting with techniques such as bias weaving and seamless construction enhances the natural flexibility of the yarns, creating fabrics that respond effortlessly to movement.

Cotton, renewed, modernized and sophisticated, is also essential in this part of the trends, as are hemp and linen. All blends have pride of place, and integrating eco-friendly filaments and yarns in natural fibers is an asset for more modernity and easy-care in searching for psychological and physical well-being and positive energy.

SOOTHING

CRAFT AND TECH

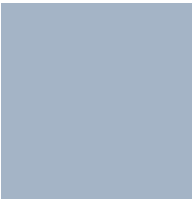

This direction speaks of positive energy, active softness, constructions, chosen imperfections, crumpled look blends, chambray colors, and recycled materials for a sometimes poorly finished, frayed look in wise, nuanced colors. Bio-sourced materials and biodegradability are in the spotlight.

A trend that brings technology into the invisibility of science and engineering, working with learning from nature. The fabrics become more 3D with fringes and tassels but remain calm.

Unlined tailoring – sheer layering. Super subtle all-over textures. A mix of delicate machine-made macrame as details and trims mix with simple fabrics.

Eclectic patterns inspired by geometry and organic forms for city living, easy streetwear, and garden inspiration.

Microstructures within grids and checks protruding areas of raised surfaces. Small geometric patterns inspired by window structures and horticulturists' greenhouses, the random repetition of low-cost building windows, the geometric gardens of housing estates, and plant walls for a relaxed, unstructured urban fashion where accessories are an important and integral part of the outfit. RESILIENCE AND UNDERSTATED AESTHETICS

Micrographics and structures. Experimentation via graphic pattern repeat/size/form/engineering, yarn and color combination. Minimalist loose or faded stripes.

This part reimagines the classic suit through the lens of France's post-World War II Zazou movement. Focusing on male and female interpretations, the modern suit is redefined by blending a workwear influence with contemporary design versatile sensibilities, rounded shapes, functional elements, and micro-graphic detail, echoing Zazou's careful reconstruction philosophy with understated elegance. With an emphasis on soft shapes, the suit adapts to life's changes, reflecting a need for garments that move harmoniously.

YARNS IN FOCUS :

Shiny silks worked with matte slub linens. Linen and shiny silk worked with matte slub linens. Blends of natural fibers and synthetic reinforcements such as polyester and nylon. Crisp materials from high-twist cotton to fine Merino, for use in traditional materials such as seersucker, terry and summer bouclé's, renewed by combining technologies or mixing with new synthetics. Soft cotton knitwear, reinforced with synthetic fibers.

ANTICIPATION

TROPICAL EXPECTATION

We are entering the height of summer, with an energetic focus on bright colors for joyful opulence. The intense colors remind us of heat waves. Embossed aspects, brilliance, and iridescence play with vibrant colors and fabricated combinations, sometimes unexpected.

Juxtapositions and superpositions for daywear, vibrancy for a study of light inspired by tropical influences with off-white and deep black enabling contrasting graphic and psychedelic patterns and new color-blocking, or a play where transparencies and superpositions dominate.

Reds are in the spotlight, tamed by their contrasting opposites. The weight of color is shown in building color saturation and pattern density effects to blur visual realities in the layering of fabrics, translucent, crimps, bleeding graphic, ikat, semi-sheer stripes, and ombre tones.

SUPERPOSITION - LAYERING - ASYMMETRY

Inspired by architectural designs and a dynamic interaction between form and function. Diffused color block and overlapping linear patterns

Vibrant earth tones and asymmetrical layers create a protective but feminine barrier. Space exploration, ultra-light nylons, and innovative textiles for inspiration. Graphic inspiration, transparency, layering, body mapping, ribs, vibrant blocks. Extended lengths, sewn, combined to suggest various ways of mixing parts of garments, such as asymmetric hemlines. Layered textures or fabrics create depth and duality in function, where the same piece can be worn or styled in different ways, revealing different looks based on how it is draped or adjusted. Patterns that shift or transform visually depending on how the garment is worn, such as a reversible knit.

STUDY OF LIGHT - GRAPHIC INSPIRATION

Mixing warm and cold colors and their interaction mimics how light shifts throughout the day - graphic inspiration.

Diffused block colors evoke the interplay between sun and shadow, creating depth and contrast-soft, blended, gradual color transitions. Overlapping linear patterns evoke protective architecture and structural layering in translucent materials that mimic the weightlessness of space-inspired textiles. The prints are pleated and superimposed to create a false transparency, a pointillist look, and an impression of movement.

More figuratively, we can also study the evolution of Caribbean culture and the madras in lighter weight and sun-drenched tones. Synthetic yarns increase visual color density and achieve high shine and a wet-glazed look.

YARNS IN FOCUS :

Shine, luster, and sparkle are key yarn characteristics accompanying sheer and transparent effects under this trend. The focus is on sustainable fibers such as Eco-friendly viscose (Ecovero, Livaeco, Ecojilin), recycled nylon, polyester, acetate, and other functional synthetics. Silk is also utilized for its inherent natural sheen and luxurious texture. Additionally, high-twist cotton with a dry hand feel is incorporated.

DISTRACTION

EMOTION IN MOTION - BREAKING THE MOULD

Retro style and sports aspects for a sexy trend that pays tribute to the body. A dynamic trend for circular knits inspired by sports. Bodysuits, swimsuits, shorts, leggings, and jumpsuits are becoming integral parts of the daily wardrobe, worn with sportswear, hooded jackets, or loose knitwear.

Our emotions drive our creative expressions in a world constantly bombarded by external stimuli. "Distraction: Emotion in Motion" reflects the duality of our current state of mind, merging creativity with tranquility. This direction is inspired by the need to zoom in and out just as athletes prepare, focus, and perform, as well as how the younger generation balances social distractions and how materials, forms, motion, and comfort play a role in health and well-being. It balances serene elegance with vibrant creativity, catering to calm and exuberance and favoring comfort over mere functionality.

The city sports idea goes together with the re-generation of big cities, where green spots pop up and attract people to practice sports and socialize. The influence of the Paris Olympics and the integration of beach sports in the city (efforts to clean up water and urban renewal) strengthened this new vibe.
